34.8

What are the environmental consequences of urbanization on such a massive scale? One major effect of urbanization is the creation of "urban heat islands." Rural areas can remain cooler due to the sun evaporating the moisture from the vegetation and the soil. However, in the cities there is much less soil and vegetation. Consequently, the sun beating on the buildings and roads leads to an increase in temperatures. Additional heat from vehicles, factories, and cooling units also increases temperatures. This heat then causes changes in local weather patterns. Not only is there increased air pollution, but also higher levels of rainfall, resulting in flooding within the cities themselves and also downstream. Another consequence of urbanization is the increased consumption of food, energy, and durable goods. This has a far-reaching impact on levels of natural resources.

Rats have a sense of smell that is so well developed that they can detect traces of TB in test samples given by humans. They signify when they smell TB by rubbing their legs together and are then given a treat through a syringe. There are a number of reasons why this is such an important breakthrough. First, the rats are able to spot the disease in its early stages, which is so much better than testing later because then treatment can be started right away on any patients who have tested positive. TB is treatable if it is detected in its early stages. If left undetected, it can be deadly. Second, rats only take 30 minutes to test nearly 100 samples. This is so much more efficient than human laboratory testing, which can take up to four days to do the same number. Finally, using rats is so much cheaper than buying expensive devices and paying a lot of money per test. This is important because TB is still a global concern. The situation in Mozambique was so bad that TB was declared a national emergency in 2006. By 2014, 60,000 people were said, by the ministry of health, to be infected.

The Space Race produced two truly iconic moments in the history of humankind. The first happened on April 12, 1961, when Yuri Gagarin became the first human in space. The entire Vostok 1 mission, including one orbit around Earth, lasted only 1 hour 29 minutes. Gagarin's voyage changed how people all over the world thought about [-] space. Just over eight years later in July, 1969, [-] Neil Armstrong, "Buzz" Aldrin, and Michael Collins traveled to space in the Apollo 11 space craft. On July 20 1969, Armstrong stepped onto the Moon's dusty surface. What he actually said next is an interesting story in itself. For many years he argued that he said, "That's one small step for a man, one giant leap for mankind." After listening to repeated transmission recordings, however, he admitted that he may have dropped the indefinite article "a." Either way, it was a huge step for mankind.
